COLONIAL THEATRE. A Gentleman from Mississippi, Featuring Tom Wise.

One of the most delightful stories seen at the Colonial theater is the one for today, entitled A Gentleman from Mississippi, featuring Tom Wise. This superb drama, played by the originator of the role of the new senator, is one that cannot fail to appeal to all, be-cause the scenes are laid in the south, a magnificent Colonial home being the ekground of many of the most brilliant scenes. Truly real cotton fields are seen, where the candidate for senator is with his colored help raising an enormous crop. A congressman from his district attempts to influence investing in the new lands which he had hoped the senator would favor in of each such corporation a and advocate. This done, the senator mit same to general assembly. meets with two factions in Washington, one an honest secretary and the other grafting senators and the connan. It is decided to purchase the swamp lands, but the senator shows his hand and proves that the purchases made by his children were made in his name and consequently he is the gainer. The picture abounds in wonderful scenes and Tom Wise is at his best as the dear old senator. Tomorrow is Tom Moore in a mystefying Kalem drama. Remember, this is library contest theatre, and we give ten votes with every matinee ticket and five with every evening

My old sorrow wakes and cries:

For I know it is dawn in the far, fa North
And a scarlet sun doth rise;
Like a scarlet fleece the si spreads
And the icy founts run free;
And the bergs begin to bow their hea
And plunge and sail in the sea. Oh, my lost love! my own love! my lov-Oh, my lost love! my own love! my love that loved me so! Is there never a chink in the wor! above Where they listen for words from below?

Nay, I spake once, and I grieved the sore.

I remember all that I saw.

And now I shall see thee no more
